The narrative vividly portrays the realities of conflict, displacement, and the relentless search for water. Park masterfully uses parallel storylines to highlight the enduring human spirit and the critical importance of resources for survival and hope.

The book is divided into two alternating narratives, with Salva's story taking place during the Second Sudanese Civil War (1983-2005) and Nya's story in 2008. Salva's journey is one of immense hardship, as he is separated from his family and embarks on a perilous walk across Sudan and eventually to refugee camps in Ethiopia and Kenya.
