The Meaning and Origin of "Let the Nations Be Glad"

The phrase “Let the Nations Be Glad” originates from a biblical and missiological context that emphasizes the joy and worship of all peoples worldwide. It is derived from Psalm 67:4, which calls for the nations to rejoice and praise God. The phrase gained renewed prominence through influential Christian literature, particularly the book titled Let the Nations Be Glad by John Piper. This work frames missions not merely as a task but as a pursuit of God’s glory and the delight of believers in seeing all nations worship Him.

Biblical Roots

Psalm 67:4 states, “Let the nations be glad and sing for joy,” highlighting the universal scope of God’s salvation plan. This scriptural foundation underlines that God’s glory is intended to be revealed among all peoples, not just a select group. The Old and New Testaments consistently emphasize the inclusion of the Gentiles in worship, showcasing a global vision for God’s kingdom.

John Piper’s Contribution

John Piper’s book, Let the Nations Be Glad, has been pivotal in popularizing this concept within modern evangelical circles. Piper argues that the ultimate goal of missions is the joy of all peoples in the glory of God through Christ. His theological insights have shaped many mission strategies and worship practices by centering joy and worship as the motivations behind evangelism.

Theological Foundations of Let the Nations Be Glad

The theological framework behind let the nations be glad pdf materials stresses God's glory as the supreme purpose of all creation and redemption.
