Meaning and Definition of Ramro

The word ramro in Nepali language primarily translates to "good," "beautiful," "nice," or "excellent" in English. It is an adjective used to describe objects, people, behaviors, and situations that possess positive qualities. The term is versatile and can be applied to physical appearance, moral character, performance, and general conditions. Ramro embodies the concept of desirability and approval, often conveying admiration or satisfaction.

Literal and Figurative Meanings

Literally, ramro refers to something visually pleasing or attractive. Figuratively, it extends to intangible qualities such as kindness, skill, or favorable circumstances. For example, a person can be described as ramro for their good nature or helpfulness, while a day with pleasant weather can also be termed ramro.

Synonyms and Related Words

In Nepali, several words share similar meanings with ramro, including "sundar" (beautiful), "thik" (fine), and "sajilo" (easy or comfortable depending on context). However, ramro remains one of the most commonly used adjectives to express general goodness or quality.

Grammatical Usage of Ramro

Ramro functions as an adjective in Nepali grammar and agrees with the noun it modifies in gender and number to some extent. It is used in various sentence structures to qualify nouns and sometimes verbs to express positive attributes.

Agreement and Forms

Ramro changes form based on the gender of the noun it describes. For masculine nouns, it remains "ramro," while for feminine nouns, it changes to "ramri." For example, "ramro keta" means a good boy, and "ramri keti" means a good girl. This gender agreement is crucial for grammatical correctness in Nepali sentences.

Usage in Sentences

Ramro is typically placed before the noun it modifies. It can also be used predicatively with the verb "huncha" (is/are) to describe the subject. For instance:

- यो पुस्तक राम्रो छ। (Yo pustak ramro cha.) – This book is good.
- उ राम्रो मान्छे हो। (U ramro manche ho.) – He is a good person.
