The schedule may also indicate special instructions or accommodations for students with approved needs. It is important to recognize the distinction between regular exam periods and special sessions, such as deferred or supplementary exams.

Key Elements of the Schedule

The exam timetable usually displays the following key elements:

- Course Code and Name: Identifies the specific course associated with the exam.

Types of Exam Sessions

The University of Toronto organizes exams into several sessions throughout the academic year. The main exam periods typically occur at the end of each semester, such as the fall and winter exam sessions. Additionally, there may be supplementary exams for students who did not pass or could not attend the original exam.
